The Hungarian House of New York

The Hungarian House is located in a prime section of the Upper East Side of Manhattan, Yorkville. The building, conceived in a traditional style, shows Neo-Classical ornamentation fashionable in the late 19th century. On three levels, it contains offices, a library, and various meeting rooms.

The Hungarian House is the home of several non-profit organizations, including the American Hungarian Library and Historical Society, the Hungarian Scout Association, the Széchenyi István Society, and the American Foundation for Hungarian Literature and Education.
